

National Museum of Funeral History
The Most Famous Burial of All Time: The Shroud of Turin

Genevieve Keeney-Vazquez, Museum Curator and Rudolph Dichtl, STURP team member ©2023 STERA, Inc.

On April 27, 2023, the National Museum of Funeral History celebrated the Grand Opening of their latest permanent exhibit, The Most Famous Burial of All Time: The Shroud of Turin. The event included the participation of three former STURP team members, Rudolph Dichtl, Kenneth Stevenson and Barrie Schwartz, who made a special visual presentation, now available on video titled, “An Evening With The Experts” as part of the Grand Opening ceremonies.

As mentioned in the accompanying article on Shroud.com, one local reporter for the Texas Catholic Herald incorrectly claimed that the new exhibit was the only permanent Shroud exhibit in America, and this was picked up and repeated by countless media outlets around the world. Here is a link to the May 9, 2023 issue which carried the original story. There were countless other internet articles that repeated the same error, so I won't include them here. The accompanying article mentioned above was written specifically to set the record straight.

Many well-known Shroud scholars attended the event, including Nora Creech, Myra Adams and Guy Powell. Since I was too busy to make very many photographs myself, I am grateful to Myra and Guy for sending me a nice selection of excellent photographs, which I am including here. The following photographs are © 2023 Myra Adams:

Ken Stevenson, Barrie Schwartz and Rudy Dichtl

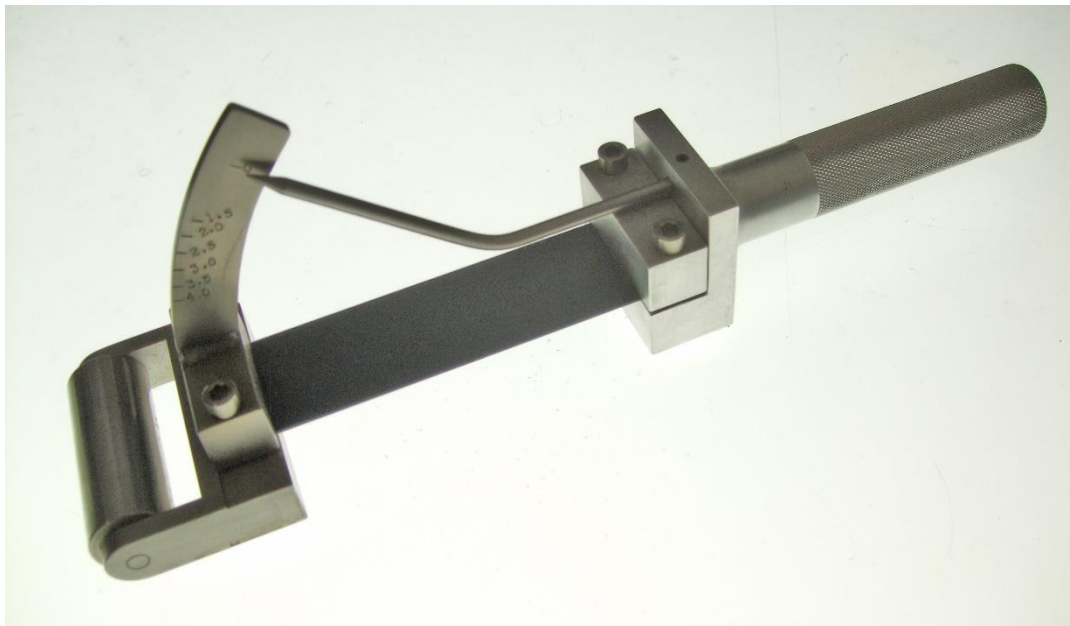

The following photographs are © 2023 Guy Powell (unless otherwise noted below):

Torque Applicator
Metal and Plastic
United States, ca. 1978
© Barrie M. Schwartz Collection, STERA, Inc.

Scientific Application
This applicator and others, were used to collect pollen and dust samples from the Shroud in 1978.

Ray Rogers' Torque Applicator - © 2023 STERA, Inc.

Nora Creech, Barrie Schwartz, Rudy Dichtl & Ken Stevenson at the Museum ^

Ken Stevenson, Rudy Dichtl, Nora Creech and Barrie Schwartz on stage during "An Evening with the Experts" presentation

And my personal favorite:

Old friends...